BACK :: AGAIN :: FROM :: NEW :: YORK!

The Most Successful Trip He Ever Made.

The Political Excitement in New York has been intense, Business Completely Demoralized. Every Importer and Manufacturer anxious to Unload. Everybody excited on the Tariff Issue. High was in a position to take Advantage of this Condition of Things. High and his Able Assistants Scoured the Market, buying right and left.

60 Cents on the Dollar Was His Limit on Goods,

But They Secured Many Lots at 50 Cents, and Even Less Than Half-Price.

Cloaks. Cloaks. Cloaks.

Thousands upon thousands of the newest and handsomest Cloaks were shown in Atlanta. All of them were bought at about half-price. High fortunately secured many lots from the following well-known houses: Benjamin & Caspary, Popkin & Marks, A. F. Pfeiffer & Co., Meyer, Mason & Co., Deutscher, & Co., Broadhead & Co., Dunham, Buckley & Co., and lots of other concerns.

OPPORTUNITIES LOST.

HOW PRETTY STAGE WOMEN ARE BADLY SPOILED.

The Election Days Are Gone, the Saddest of the Year—Ethel Sprague and Her Future—Stage Gossip of Interest.

New York, November 9, 1888.—The election has come and gone—gone to the dogs, in the opinion of the good democrats of New York. But whatever the result, the theatrical managers are happy. There is nothing on earth so calculated to make the managerial heart sick as a howling mob of fifty thousand people yelling "Rats! Rats! Chinese Rats!" or some such delectable nonsense while the best seats in the house are being begged and the famous stars are playing to audience like that of which Puffo in Woolf's talks—"Five lamps, and two of 'em went out before the first act."

And now it is gone—gone but not forgotten. Most of the Theatricals are democrats, and many a good week's salary has gone with Cleveland's chances. But the biggest losers are those ambitious gentlemen who thought they could make some new attraction go despite the election excitement.

The only thing they were able to make go was their money. That went easily enough.

Volumes could be written upon the subject of the whims and fancies of fair women and still the half would not told.

The fair maid or matron whose physical beauty is professedly divine in her costume is just now decked in a highly ornate and sumptuous attire at the costume of one of the participants in the Midsummer Night's Dream revival, and this same costume is being variously commented upon by the press.

The young woman who wears the part of Oberon the much-esteemed. The reason for it all is simply that she appears with her left shoulder entirely bare—no straps or anything of the sort to hide the pink beauty of her anatomy. The costume is cut so as to be obviously from the neck to the left shoulder.

The philosopher may say that this is no worse than the costumes of the tens of thousands of women whose shoulders are concealed by nothing, but the most fragile straws imaginable, but society woman is about to have an idea, and experience teaches me that the society woman usually has own way.

You may be sure that everybody looks at Oberon's shoulders.

Duncan Harrison and Joe Howard are the dramatics persona in a little episode which would be a sensation were it not for the fact that the election excitement swallowed it up. The election was nothing more nor less than a political whipping.

Howard was the person attacked and Harrison was at the other end of the whip.

Nobody seems to know the cause of it all. Neither of the principals will talk. Harrison says he has no idea what it is for and Howard keeps his mouth shut.

All of which makes the curious more curious and everybody is wondering what it all means.

The Sun published a day or two ago a talk with a well-known theatrical manager which contained some "powerful" sensible ideas.

"It is astonishing to observe," says the manager, "how little some women of beauty and general display in the world. Give a girl a good education, she will exhibit good taste and wisdom in managing her career in life; but stamp her with a heritage of beauty, and the result cannot fail to be disastrous in nine cases out of ten. Take Fay Templeton and Sadie Martin as examples. Speaking as a theatrical manager, I can assure you that a girl of such a capacity of making money could have been found in the profession three years ago than these. Both are pretty, clever, accomplished and bright. Sadie Martin iniques after the grand old dame of the opera stage, and Fay Templeton was the best lesseuse woman in the country. Where are they today? Templeton is singing in "Evangeline," out in Florida, and doing so badly that the papers are seeing her sharply for the lack of interest in the profession she has chosen. In which she sights her part, while Martin is wandering about New York without an engagement, broken-spirited and more or less like Miss Templeton, who is away from the Farnham stage, while Fay Templeton was the best lesseuse woman in the country. Where are they today? Templeton is singing in "Evangeline," out in Florida, and doing so badly that the papers are seeing her sharply for the lack of interest in the profession she has chosen. A twisted nose or a queer eye for Miss Templeton or Miss Martin would doubtless have spoiled the beauty of these pretty women, but they would have developed an amount of good sense from the infliction which would have amply repaid them for the lack of beauty.

A young woman who is receiving enough notice from the press to turn any young woman's head, Ethel Sprague, daughter of Mrs. K. L. Sprague.

Miss Ethel, who is sweet 17, and is described as bright and brainy, with magnificent physical development, is already talked of as a candidate for stage fame.

Now, she is a sensible girl, her debut yet.

Just now she is a student at the Lyceum school, but it is announced that she is surely enough destined for the stage and her mother is enthusiastic over her prospects.

If she is not too badly spoiled by newspaper talk she may amount to something.

This week has been woefully devoid of theatrical novelties. In fact, there is nothing new at any of the theatres, and about the only interest manifested is in the approaching engagement of Miss Anna May, who will appear at Palmetto on Tuesday evening in "The Merchant's Tale." Margaret Mathis is here with a strong company, but not "the manager" of M. H. Hill. As for the rest, "Lord Chum," "Hoys' Skirts," "Dockstaden and Daily furnish music" is here, and "Booth and Barrett next—a great production of "Othello," "Merchant of Venice" and others.

MAY WELTON.

FOOTLIGHT FLASHES.

"When I have a role to create," says Coquelin, the famous French actor, "I begin by reading the drama, and then I act it. I first endeavor to decide upon the scope of my part, and then to decide upon the piece. I next study its psychology. Having found out what the character thinks and what he means, I then endeavor to make it as natural as possible—his carriage, his words and his gestures. When these points are settled, I learn my part with the greatest care, and then, having got it all by heart, I take up my character, and closing my eyes, I say to him, 'Now, speak your piece.' I then put my mind in my mouth, and get the words and phrases out of my mouth, and my hands and gestures before me. I have now made a mistake. It is that high praise indeed, but no one deserved more than Miss DuPre."

Mrs. Rose Coghill has been engaged for a small part in the playhouse. She is the wife of Tony Coghill, the famous Tony Coghill, and her husband spent his leisure time in writing plays and his constructive features in art. Similar to Mrs. Coghill's pause to say: "I am inclined to intersect her path, but I am sure that Minnie DuPre is that on my lips. If anybody has any objection to that, I have made a mistake. Respectfully,

D. R. G. JACKSON.

MR. J. F. FLYNN, General Eastern Agent,
Park Row, New York City.

ATLANTA, GA., NOVEMBER 11, 1888.

The Democratic Future.

What of the future of the democratic party?

Let us see what we have lost. We have lost in the north Indiana and New York. In the south, West Virginia and Delaware. We hold Connecticut by a decreased majority that makes it a very unsafe state. We hold New Jersey comparatively safe. The republican states are deeper than ever in republicanism. To regain power, as matters now stand, we must reverse 12,000 majority in New York, 2,500 in Indiana, and recover, which we can certainly do, West Virginia and Delaware. On a wise platform and under wise leadership we can do all this—if the situation is not changed.

But the battle of 1892 will be fought in the congress of the next four years. The senate and house are republican, and are backed by a republican president. The party is determined, through legislation, to make it impossible for the democracy to ever see daylight again—if such legislation can be devised and passed. There are three points that will be pressed.

First—to supervise southern elections by federal machinery, and, if necessary, by federal bayonets. Several plans are proposed for this. Mr. Chandler has a bill, and another is prepared by which United States circuit judges shall appoint a returning board for every southern state.

Second—to base representation in the electoral college, not on population as at present, but on the average vote cast for a series of years in congressional elections. It is said that President Harrison is committed to this policy. This, of course, would diminish the strength of the south in the electoral college and forever put it out of power.

Third—to at once admit as states, Montana, Washington territory, and North and South Dakota. This would give eight republican senators and add twelve electoral votes to the republican count. The ordinary census gains in the west will more than balance the gains in Texas and Alabama. So that the republicans would go into the election of 1892 stronger by twelve electoral votes than now, and with the senate perpetually theirs. It is openly stated that New Mexico and Arizona would not be admitted—for they are democratic.

These are the disclosed plans of the republicans. To put an alien returning board over the returns of every southern state—to readjust the apportionment so as to make the vote, rather than population, the basis of representation—and by admitting republican territories and excluding democratic territories, to add to the certain republican votes in the electoral college. In losing both houses the democrats have lost the power to prevent the consummation of these schemes—either of which will make democratic success impossible for years to come.

The battle of 1892 must, therefore, be fought in the senate and in the house. If the minority there can be borne down and overwhelmed—if no appeal can be made there that will touch the conscience of the public and arrest the infamous conspiracy—if these usurpations are made good and incorporated in the law of the land—then the outlook is gloomy indeed. If in the senate or in the house these schemes can be arrested—these conspirators so denounced that they will falter in their work—if the people can be aroused to see the enormity of the outrage against liberty and the constitution involved in their schemes—then the democracy can and will be restored to power in 1892. But everything depends on the ability of the democratic minority in the senate and the house to so sturdily and so eloquently fight for equal rights, for equal states, and against the prostitution of the government to partisan ends, that the republican majority cannot or dare not consummate these flagrant schemes. In congress, then, must the first battle of 1892 be fought!

Whatever happens, the duty of the democrats of the south is plain. They must stand together. They must close their ranks, until shoulder touches shoulder, and every man is ready to march wherever and whenever there is democratic work to do. The salvation of the south—its prosperity, its peace, its happiness—all these depend on the integrity and the supremacy of the democratic party in its own affairs, even if denied participation in the affairs of the country at large.

Let every southern democrat but agree to this, and all will be well with us and with ours.

What a walk-over the democratic party would have had if it had taken the advice of Samuel J. Randall instead of relying on the theories of Parsee Moore!

A Little Weather.

A pinch of cold weather came down from the north yesterday, and ruffled the feathers of the jay-birds that were careering around blithely the day before.

Gray clouds filled the air, and the chilly winds, striking and shaking the dying grass, caused the grasshoppers to cease their flying and sizzling. Brown and yellow leaves whirled through the air, and the birds that would have sung were silent in the case of Sackville-West.

It is all right. If our new president considers it good policy to monkey with the court of St. James by sending Mr. Blaine over there, it is safe to predict an international episode of very picturesque phases

But the skies wept heartily over democratic defeat, and now we are to have a touch of the inclemency we predicted.

Well, let us make the most of it. Nature is serene, whatever the state of the weather, and there is no reason why the poor little atom that calls man should not make an attempt to follow her example.

Let us be cheerful. Death, disappointments, war, tempests and upheavals of the earth are but parts of a great purpose. What the Lord wills is for the best—though we confess we cannot see it just that way at present.

GROVER CLEVELAND'S luck was not against Henry Watterson's rot and rock.

Enough of the Northwest, Thank You!

For heaven's sake let us never hear again the promise of democratic gains in the northwest!

Every election we are promised that the farmers of the northwest are going to come right into camp and bring several states along with them.

This year it was all fixed! We were to get them, sure. A fence couldn't keep them out. We were to be scrouched up to make room for them. Michigan especially was just honest to go in.

Well, they didn't come! We have lost seventeen congressmen out there, which hardly leaves us enough for seed. The republican majorities are increased everywhere. As for Michigan, she lifted herself up from her slim republican majority of 3,832 in 1884 to over 18,000 in 1888! From the New Jersey line to the Pacific ocean the west is solidly republican—and is going to stay that way. Our hope is, and has been, New York, New Jersey and Connecticut.

WELL, we made Mr. Sackville-West hump himself, anyhow!

The Tariff Question Here.

The republicans are going to nominate and support a full city ticket.

Accept this as a fact. They may fuse with the third party. They may run a straight ticket. In any event it will be headed by a republican, and will have colored men on the ticket.

THE BOSTON HERALD is talking about the power of sentiment as shown by the recent election. What struck us most was the power of votes.

THE NEW YORK HERALD, the morning after the election, printed a perfect Herald in London. It was a duplicate of the American edition in appearance—with 12,000 words by cable, 8,000 words by wire from Paris, 6,000 from Berlin, and the cable news from the European capital. The news cost $20,000, but was a great economical and of other disorders, both acute and chronic, has been a more potent ally of therapeutics than any panacea offered by alchemy or any hobbledog presented by modern chemistry."

THE NEW YORK HERALD,

JOHN H. INMAN

TALKS OF THE IMPORTANCE OF THE CONSOLIDATED SYSTEM.

What it Means to Georgia and the South—A Talk Which Means Much for Georgia—What is to Be Done.

While in New York I had a long talk with Mr. John H. Inman, president of the Richmond Terminal company, which, by two recent trials of enormous magnitude, adds to its control of the Richmond and Danville railroad the East Tennessee and the Central system of Georgia.

Mr. Inman talked fully as to the purposes and plans of the Central railroad and the immense combination, forming as it does one of the most extensive railroad systems in the United States. He was enthusiastic in the promise that the new system would prove a great benefit to the industrial and commercial interests of the south.

"In the first place," said he, "it must be understood that the Central railroad, in the proper sense, is not a railroad company, but an investment company, and that by its purchase of the original company's stock, the Central railroad is not at all subordinate to the East Tennessee or the Richmond and Danville, but that its integrity as a great enterprise will be preserved. So it is with the East Tennessee and Richmond and Danville, and each of these systems will continue to be operated as independent organizations. We have now ordered two magnificent new vessels for the Central's line of steamers, a cost of nearly a million dollars, and we shall increase its fleet from time to time to meet the increase in business.

We propose to take up the line of the most important of all southern railroads. To do this will, of course, be necessary to take away a great part of the business which now goes to Norfolk, and as I will show later, this is the milk in the economy of the opposition which has been brought to bear to prevent the transaction by which the consolidated system is to be created. Instead of making Norfolk our coast distributing point we shall turn our commerce southward and deliver it at Brunswick and Savannah, each of which ports will be very benefited."

"What?" I asked, "will be the effect of the combination?"

"The effect," replied Mr. Inman, "will be to nearly bring the three great systems into better accord, thus enabling them to better subserve the public good. We shall allow no discriminations, but will equalize rates between all points in our territory; giving every town on the line of any of these roads equal advantages with other towns. In other words, we will not discriminate in favor of any one town or city of our own or against another, and will certainly allow no discrimination in favor of certain parties against others. This has been a source of great complaint throughout the south, and the smaller railroads are put at unfair disadvantage when they are not doing a large business, are even superior to those in foreign ports. We will equalize rates in all things simply by seeing that the present regulations concerning rates are carried out. As to the matter of breaking down competition I feel that it is unnecessary for me to say this much, as it is well known that the entering of the south can not succeed if the facilities for transportation will be bettered, and that that will be lowered, rather than advanced, on all of our lines. It shall be our endeavor to perfect the railroad system of the south as far as in our power, and to give the people the benefit of as cheap rates as possible. They can rest assured that nothing will be done to bring about an advance in rates, or, in single particular. That is, of course, to say, on the other hand it is our purpose to give the people the advantages of as cheap railroads as are enjoyed anywhere in the United States. Almost my entire interest is in the south, and on its prosperity depends mine. The line of roads which we propose to consolidate extends to the territory through which they pass. For instance, who would divide the connection which the Pennsylvania railroad has made between New York and St. Louis, or who would break up the single organization which now controls all lines operated between the two great cities? It was once proposed by a half a dozen different organizations, each with their own rates, and the consequence was that the diversity of control resulted in much higher rates than single organization has brought about. These lines now give cheaper rates than ever before in their history, and the same thing has been found to be the case in all other instances."

"It will be the immediate effect of the combination in Georgia."

"We have already determined to build a magnificent new depot in Atlanta, and we propose to begin work as soon as possible. The business of the city has entirely outgrown its present depots facilities and it is as though every thing in the city were to be concentrated in the one place. We will allow no discrimination in favor of any one place. We will likewise build a new depot for the city of Augusta, its present one being too small, and the damage which was occasioned by the recent flood necessitated a new structure. We will build depots in each of these places of which both cities will be the centers, and every thing will be done to make the new depots as comfortable and complete as possible. An immense business will be turned to Savannah and Brunswick, and of course, we will have to make improvements in both of these places commensurate with the business we turn there."

"What will be the effect of the combination?"

"Atlanta's trade will be greatly benefited by the combination. It is clearly to the interest of the railroads to promote her manufacturing industries and her commerce, for the more business she does the more freight the railroads will receive; and there is no better place to do this than in the south, against her. She has passed that period in her growth when she can afford to look to the section immediately surrounding for her entire business. She must seek a wider field. This field the great Terminal system will give, and its purpose is to see that everything is done to widen the market for her products to its effect on other towns."

"Atlanta's growth means the growth of the towns and cities surrounding her. She is vitally interested in the prosperity of the entire south, and it is a narrow policy that does not recognize that she is the center of the city in the south, and by the prosperity of all, she is in the position to benefit the prosperity of all."

"Do you anticipate any trouble from the litigation instituted to break the transaction?"

"We do not. The Norfolk and Western is behind the litigation attacking the lease of the East Tennessee to the Richmond and Danville. Those who have instituted suit do not represent 20 or 30 per cent of the business of the East Tennessee. The Norfolk and Western simply see that the gain of Savannah and Brunswick will be the loss of Norfolk, and of the great business which it now receives from the East Tennessee and the Richmond and Danville for Norfolk. The promoters of this litigation see clearly that if the policy of the Terminal system is carried out, the Norfolk and Western will lose a great portion of this business which will be turned away and sent over the Central and East Tennessee to Brunswick and Savannah."

Good day.

Such is a brief history of a massacre that created an intense excitement through western Texas, and made many settlers agree with General Sheridan when he remarked that if he had to live in hell or Texas he would sell Texas and live in the other place.

Marion Mann, an old citizen of Griffin, who for some time has been occupying a room over Niles' clothing store, was found in it Sunday morning in a perfectly nude condition. His room was a perfect wreck, he having torn down his bed and placed it in the middle of the room, and upon it he had laid across a mat of the bed and upon inquiry stated that he had been killing bedbugs all night, and up to date had slain 5,000. There was one very large one, however, that had eluded his efforts to kill him, and had led him into a chase of several hours, during which he had been suffering from a mild attack of lumbago, and was perfectly harmless. For some time past he has been suffering from paralysis, and has several severe strokes.

PROHIBITION M. A. B.

AS OUTLINED AND NAMED BY THE PROHIBITIONISTS LAST NIGHT.

Notice Given That the Prohibition Question is to Be Agitated—Mr. Small Introduces Some Resolutions—Some Others Talk.

In all but numbers there was a big meeting at the courthouse last night.

There is to be a new M. A. B.

So the meeting declared, and they talked like they were in earnest.

About 100 people were in the courthouse basement at half-past seven, the time for the meeting to begin.

It was some twenty minutes past that time when Mr. Small entered the room and made his way to the stand. He called the meeting to order at once.

"The first thing before us tonight," said he, "is the selection of a chairman and secretary for this meeting."

Dr. Perkins nominated Mr. Green Dodd for chairman, and Mr. Small nominated Mr. Perkins for secretary. Both gentlemen were elected unanimously.

Mr. Dodd Talks.

"I was unexpectedly called to preside over the meeting last night," continued Mr. Dodd, "and the call tonight is equally unexpected. We feel that we have been bottled up by a few friends who signed that pledge not to agitate the prohibition question. We discussed that action last night and denounced it as unauthorized, and this meeting was called to get a general expression of opinion from the prohibitionists of Atlanta in regard to that contract or trade. We are not here to make a ticket. I have been here thirty-five years and I want peace. I think that is the spirit of the prohibition party. I took part in the war movement for the formation of the consecutive ticket, and consented to the compromise in the hope that it would stop the eternal strife. The antis have not been so bold and fair, and have not come on the ticket. I believe the five men that signed that paper did so with a pure motive, thinking they would be able to control and bring down the ticket headed by Mr. Brown. But today there is a full whisky ticket out, and they say they are out to rule or ruin. I am opposed now, as I stated last night, to getting out a full prohibition ticket. We are here to take some action upon the trade that binds some prohibitionists not to agitate the liquor question for two years more."

Sam Small Talks.

At the conclusion of Mr. Dodd's address Mr. Small arose.

"A committee," said he, "was appointed last night to consider if we were or prudent to adopt a prohibition ticket. That committee, of which I am a member, have agreed that it is not best, at this time, to make any report. I have, speaking for myself, no desire to draw on a committee to arouse antagonistic and partisan feelings. I have a series of resolutions to offer as embodying the sense of a large number of us. Before that, though, I want to say that I have been approached, since I returned to Atlanta, to be a member of the committee to agitate the prohibition question.

It has been rumored that the purpose of my visit home was to agitate the prohibition question. Now, I am only a citizen. I have more business before me than I can attend to in three years to come and if my personal preference controls my movements I will be in New York city to-morrow. I am here, however, because I believe just as firmly as I believe my name's Sam Small, that prohibition is in imminent danger of being stamped out of Fulton county for all time, and for far as I am concerned, out of existence. As we did two years ago, is concerned. If the conservative ticket is elected without a protest, Fulton county is given over to the liquor men for all time to come. As between individuals, I wouldn't give a cent of my fingers that the conservative ticket is elected. The principle of prohibition is everything to me, and I shall never surrender it.

"No man, no five men, can muzzle me or make me think that I am muzzled to my conscience. Frankly, either of them ticket represented anything in favor of prohibition. I would be the last man to protest, but then I ask him, 'What are you for?' he'll protest to ignore the liquor question altogether. What more could the liquor men do? They say there are four prohibitionists on the ticket, but they were not elected on the prohibition ticket and they go reluctantly to ignore the very principle that they are fighting for on the ticket. Why are they there? To catch you and me to muzzle us. The gentlemen that signed that agreement have presumed on their wealth and their influence to do what the legislature in session now wouldn't do, and when the conservative comes to town, he'll now wouldn't do. They have said that we shall not agitate this question every two years, but every four years instead. In order that John Thomas Glenn and W. M. Middlebrooks, and John H. Brandt would be asked to mortgage this city to the devil for two years more. That is worth more—those four men or the sobriety of this city? No eight men are worth that. I wouldn't vote for the conservative ticket if every man on it was a pro-slavery man, and I would not vote for a ticket which shall be elected—from a prohibition standpoint, neither of them is worth of contending for. I just want to put John Goodwin and Adolph Brandt on notice that we repudiate that trade; that the gentlemen there is not with me to be able to deliver the goods." [Applause.]

"Who made the trade?" asked a man in the audience.

"Samuel, M. C. Kiser, P. L. Myatt, W. A. Henshaw, H. L. Calvert," answered Mr. Small. "That takes both papers and padlocks them by their own act. The wisest thing the antis can do is to go back and support Walter Brown. The trade's off, and that's the only way to do it."

"The way the conservative ticket must be elected, if it's elected at all, by prohibition votes. If that's so, it ought to be a prohibition ticket. If it is not a prohibition ticket, then the prohibitionists oughtn't to vote for it, for we won't vote for it under any circumstances."

"You are advised to ignore the question of prohibition. My opinion is that the election of a republican president and a republican legislature is the best hope upon the people. As a matter of policy, the republicans will represent the internal revenue laws and leave the states to deal with the question. That would turn North Carolina, Virginia, Tennessee, and confirm West Virginia, which is already represented by the republicans. The wisest thing the antis can do is to go back and support Walter Brown. The trade's off, and that's the only way to do it."

"The way the conservative ticket must be elected, if it's elected at all, by prohibition votes. If that's so, it ought to be a prohibition ticket. If it is not a prohibition ticket, then the prohibitionists oughtn't to vote for it, for we won't vote for it under any circumstances."

"You are advised to ignore the question of prohibition. My opinion is that the election of a republican president and a republican legislature is the best hope upon the people. As a matter of policy, the republicans will represent the internal revenue laws and leave the states to deal with the question. That would turn North Carolina, Virginia, Tennessee, and confirm West Virginia, which is already represented by the republicans. The wisest thing the antis can do is to go back and support Walter Brown. The trade's off, and that's the only way to do it."

FOURTH YEAR OF THE GREAT SUCCESS,

ALONE IN LONDON.

Robert Buchanan's great realistic and emotional drama of English life.

Presented by Colonel Slim's P.R. Theatrical Company of Brooklyn, New York.

New, realistic and effective scenery, strong mechanical effects.

See the great scenes, "Westminster Bridge," "The Old Palace House and view of the River Thames," "Opening of the Flood Gates and Rising of the Water."

The most effective and realistic scenes ever produced on the stage.

Note—Do not confound this drama with others of similar names, such as "Lost in London," "Lights of London," etc. It is entirely different in plot, locality and interest.
